The foreign correspondent's occupational bugaboo -- swollen self-importance masquerading as censorship -- cropped up in Tokyo, this month. GIs of the Far East Command saw their favorite comic strip, "Beetle Bailey", dropped from the Stars & Stripes. Insiders (as well as Stateside newspapers, news magazines and wire services) said the reason was that "Beetle" had pricked the pomposity of some swivel chair commands. Staffers grumbled about censorship in news columns as well. The story made front-page nationwide headlines ...

ROME DATLINE: -- (Special to The Bulletin) -- The Italian political crisis gave the Rome press corps rather a busy Christmas, New Year and post-New Year -- and the excitement continues. We would have had to work even harder except that while Ambassador CLARE BOOTH LUCE was in the States, a number of Italian stories broke under a Washington dateline.

Shortly before Xmas BILL DOWNS arrived in Rome to replace Ned Calmer as CBS chief.

Ned made his departure in such secrecy that few of his friends had the chance to give him the proper send-off. In fact, the first that many of them knew of his departure was the arrival of BILL DOWNS and wife, Roslyn, and the Downs small-fry. Although newcomers to Rome, BILL and Roslyn are old friends to most of us. Your correspondent served with BILL in Moscow during wartime, and later saw them in Berlin soon after their marriage. According to latest reports, they are about to move from a hotel room into more permanent quarters.

Soon after New Year's, Ogden Reid, Jr., and Walter Kerr, both of the New York Herald Tribune, briefly visited Rome enroute to Madrid and the U.S., where Walter has been reassigned to beef up the Washington bureau.

Even more recent visitors to the Eternal City were Henry Shapiro, Moscow UP correspondent up until October, and family. With his Russian wife, Ludmilla, and daughter Arisha, he recently spent several weeks in Taormina where he wrote a series of articles now appearing in many countries. After two days in Rome, Henry took off for Berlin leaving his family here. They are currently staying in our house and enjoying the free world.

JACK L. BEGON, Rome NBC correspondent, off for Berlin, where he is scheduled to take part in a "Big Four" conference of Rome, London, Paris and Bonn NBC representatives which parallels the Big Four Foreign Ministers Conference -- and will probably produce more news, especially as -- unlike the Foreign Ministers Conference -- it will be on the air.

Jack Leacacos of the Cleveland Plain Dealer took off from here for Berlin some days ago. The Bulletin's man expects to be on hand by mid-week provided things simmer down here. (by EDMUND STEVENS).

NEO-NAZISM NO THREAT,) PAST PRES. LOCHNER) TELLS PRESS CLUBBERS)

As a "constitutional optimist", Past President LOUIS P.
LOCHNER does not "share the fears of those who believe that"
Nazism is a present threat in Germany." The distinguished author and former AP bureau chief in Berlin expressed those views, based on two years writing and study in Germany, before a capacity Overseas Press Club luncheon at Toots Shor's restaurant on January 28.

While many incorrigibles undoubtedly exist in Germany, Past President LOCHNER said, democratic ideas have reached the overwhelming majority of citizens. This, he pointed out, was despite 12 years of Nazi propaganda, followed by nine years of occupation, which itself is not a climate wherein constructive work can be well accomplished.

Past President LOCHNER singled out the new German press for the first reason why Nazism could gain no future hold. Today, he said, Germany's free press fights off any efforts to regiment it. Likewise, the metropolitan papers outnumber the small papers -- which might be susceptible to propaganda -- by three to one. "I do not know one newspaper," LOCHNER said, "that would propagandize Nazism again." He also praised the State Department's program which trains German editors and newsmen in the "who-what-when, wherewhy-how" school of journalism. The old-fashioned German news technique of injecting interpolation and opinion into news stories, LOCHNER reported, has been all but abolished.

The two journalism schools now operating in Germany, the OPC Past President explained, are turning out top graduates whose services are in constant demand. "The new free press in Germany," LOCHNER said, "represents one of the great bulwarks to the new democracy."

Among other of five points he listed as deterrents to a renaissance of Nazism, LOCHNER listed the protection of the new German constitution, and the work of the force -- the Verfassungsschutz, or security police -- which constantly guards against and reports on subversive activities, much like America's FBI; the German people themselves, which unqualifiedly returned the democratic administration to office in an election in which 84.2 per cent of qualified voters filed ballots; President Theodor Huess and Chancellor Konrad Adenaur, on whom LOCHNER said the world "should need not fear for a German Republic as long as they are in office"; and the attitude of youth, which is skeptical, propaganda-rejecting and in favor of European Federation.

Vice President A. WILFRED MAY presided at the meeting, in the absence in Mexico of President J. CLIFFORD STARK. Among the many who attended: DAVID BOGUSLAV, Bulletin correspondent in Manila; CLYDE E. BROWN, HELEN BUCKLER, ANY LOGAN...ALBERT S. CROCKETT, Past Presidents JOHN DALY, WYTHE WILLIAMS, WILLIAM P. GRAY ... New Members GENE TUNNEY, TOM EUSTER and BARRY HOLLOWAY ... Philadelphia's MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER, LYNN FARNOL, ANDRE de COIZART, DOROTHY DUCAS and LEONARD DAVIS ... Esquire's STANLEY FRANKEL, Cavalcade's ANDREW HECHT, La Prensa's ALBERTO GAINZA PAS, the American Weekly's CHARLES ROBBINS ... SIGRID SCHULTZ, BRUNO SHAW, JEANNE TERRANOVA, New Member GEORGE GRISWOLD (of Newsweek), EDWIN MULLER of the Reader's Digest, Radio's elder statesman, H.V. KALTENBORN (who introduced Past President LOCHNER) and many more which space prevents, etc. The book prize, "The Atomic Submarine and Admiral Rickover", by Clay Blair, Jr. (Henry Holt, Inc.) was won by Past President WILLIAM P. GRAY.

NEW SLOTS AND SPOTS: New travel writer and assistant to the publicity director of the American Express Company is HILDA HARRISON, former public information director for the National Recreation Association ... Shifts at Time & Life: JIM BELL from Beirut to Bonn; JOHN LUTER from Rome to Life's domestic staff ...
